Donn Young, a lauded, veteran photojournalist whose photos have appeared in Time, Newsweek and the New York Times, will give a presentation on how Hurricane Katrina has affected the city's artists, its arts scene and its cultural heritage. Young, a UMASS Amherst graduate who has worked as a freelance photographer for the Boston Globe and the Boston Phoenix, speaks from first-hand experience as the hurricane ravaged his studio. For nearly four weeks the library of photography he built over 35 years—over a million images—lay beneath ten feet of water. Young is now visually documenting the ravaged spaces of many New Orleans artists and musicians. He will present this work, past work, speak of his own experience during and after Hurricane Katrina, discuss his library restoration project, and share perceptions on the future of New Orleans' arts landscape.
